

Coronavirus – Update

In light of the rapidly evolving events of recent days, and in line with the latest government guidance, all office based staff at Aldridge and Harlow are now advised to work from home unless the specific elements or roles of their job require them to be in the office.

Given the tremendous efforts made in recent days by the team at Aldridge, we are now in a position where all office-based staff are equipped to work from home, with appropriate IT equipment and phone lines in place.

These steps should ensure that the business can continue to operate with all of the key functions we have been used to continuing to be available.

For employees and workers in the field, you should therefore continue to use all the same contact numbers and emails as previously in place, subject to any specific instructions issued in recent days.

The situation continues to evolve very quickly and we will deal with any further developments as they arise.

I expect we will encounter some teething issues over coming days. If so, please be patient as these are exceptional and unprecedented circumstances for all.

The primary concern will always be the health and well being of our staff and so I urge everyone to follow the latest government guidance on self-isolation. The HR department can advise on any enquiries in this respect.

While our clients continue to review their own immediate plans and that may impact our previously scheduled work plan, we continue to provide our usual service to those clients who continue to want us on site.

Please try and remain positive under the circumstances. Stay in contact with friends and colleagues and let's ensure we keep our spirits high during these unprecedented times.

Best regards,

Dan Prickett
